The National Z Convention has been revamped and I'm so glad to hear of all the changes. The Nevada Z Car Club is not hosting the convention. The ZCCA (Z Car Club Association) has rescinded the bid that was awarded to the Nevada club due to overpricing of the events and not following schedule changes that were suggested by the Z C C A .

Officers of the ZCCA met with the Nevada club to try and work out the problems that were making this convention look like one of the least attended conventions in many years. Unfortunately the Nevada club and the ZCCA could not come to an agreement and to make sure this convention was a success the ZCCA decided to host it. I hope you have not made other plans already because there is not going to be a national Z convention this close to Southern California for many years. We will be organizing a caravan to the convention and will have all the details in the next newsletter. Group Z is planning a caravan to Las Vegas on Sunday June 25th with all the 17 Z cars coming from Japan. We have been invited to join them. If you are planning to go please contact me and tell me what day you would like to drive up. If we don't have any input from the club then the board will set a date. See the articles in the newsletter for all the details of the revised convention.

Day light savings time is finally here and that means we can have our party in the parking lot before the meeting. If you want to check out some cool Z's or show off that new modification show up at CoCo's anytime after 6:00pm.

Our club picnic is Saturday May 20th and we will have a peoples choice car show. We decided to have our annual picnic a little early this year before it starts getting hot. It will be at the Deer Park Winery and we will be displaying our Z's on the grass at this beautiful park.

I have a jacket that was left at the last meeting, it's a black nylon jacket. Call me if you think its yours.

Nissan: New Z gets 'more testosterone and strength'

MARK RECHTIN
Staff Reporter

LOS ANGELES — Nissan's revived Z car, expected to debut in mid-2002, will not be a monument to retro culture or a paean to the original 240Z, its U.S. designers vow.

"My feeling was that retro styling would become truly antiquated - as opposed to hip - once we pass the millennial marker. Because, then, it's last century and doesn't have the same charge," said Jerry Hirshberg, president of Nissan Design International, the automaker's U.S. design studio in La Jolla, Calif.

Early full-scale treatments of the new car made it look like a modern edition of the early 1970s sports car, but the clay models working their way through the studio are different.

Nissan Design International has built 12 quarter-scale and four full-scale model Zs and is still working on the final version. That rendition will be sent to Japan in five weeks to compete against the design of the corporate studio.

BOLDER

Leading the Nissan Design International project is Diane Allen, whose previous work was the rugged 2001 face-lift of the Frontier pickup. She, too, says the next Z won't look like a redone 240Z or 300ZX.

"It will be a lot more wheel-oriented, with more testosterone and strength," she said.

"With those (previous) cars, the body and wheels were flush and subtle. We're trying to be more bold. We need to look forward, embodying our heritage without borrowing the aesthetic."

Allen said the first concept Z was a litmus test to see where management stood on building a sports car.

It went from sketch pad to finished full-scale clay model in four weeks. The second design also was discarded because it was too much of a grand touring coupe.

Nissan designer Diane Allen says the next Z won't look like a redone 300ZX.

Allen said the design looks "trim and athletic but aggressive and beautiful." Contrary to rumors, she said the next Z will have a six-cylinder.

NOT POLITE

Of course, there is no guarantee Nissan Design International's design will win. But Hirshberg, who will retire June 30, the day the Z's final design is slated to be chosen, says he is confident the American studio's concept will be selected.

"We know it will be controversial," he said. "But I'd rather take risks and do a car we believe in. This will not be a polite car."

Hirshberg also promised outrageous performance for the car.

"If its performance reaches 75 percent of what the engineers say, then it will be the best performing sports car in the world, regardless of price," he said. "And ours will come in under $30,000."

UPDATE*International Z Car Convention*UPDATE

It has been officially announced that effective at noon, Tuesday, April 4, 2000, this year's Z Car Convention in Las Vegas will be hosted by ZCCA [the Z Car Club Association].

The bid that was awarded to the Nevada Z Car Club has been rescinded due to disagreements between the NZCC and the ZCCA over schedule and pricing issues. Given the nearness of the Convention, a mere twelve weeks away, Players Express has agreed to continue to handle all registrations, hotel and travel arrangements for all Conventioneers. Players Express has also agreed to honor any Convention registrations made prior to April 4th. Since the new pricing is substantially less than the costs previously published, Players Express will either provide those registered with a refund or a credit which you will be able to apply towards other Convention events. Please contact them directly to identify your previous registration and indicate your event choices and then decide on the disposition of any remaining funds. Registration and the hospitality suite will be jointly manned by ZCCA 'volunteers' and Players Express staff.

Henry Costanzo [Georgia Club], ZCCA's Assistant Director, will be handling the track events. If you have any questions, he can be reached at: [h]770-926-2390 [w] 770-926-2531 email: hcostanzo@gowebway.com.

Mark Lambert [Maryland], ZCCA Show Car Committee Chair, will be handling the car show. If you have any questions, he can be reached at [h]410-857-4320 or email: rcampetilli@erols.com. You can also obtain a copy of the current Car Show Manual at www.zcca.org.

Because of the short time frame to line everything up, and the myriad of details that are usually addressed a year in advance, your individual cooperation and understanding is appreciated in advance - we are sure there will be some snafu's but everything will be worked out with a smile!!

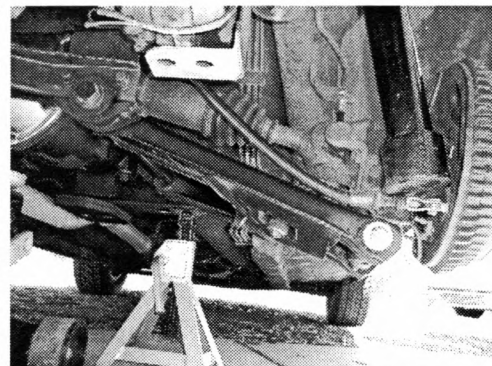

FYI: Mr. K is anxiously counting the days to the Convention and so are the owners of 17 Z's being shipped to the Convention compliments of Nissan. A recent email from Tetsu 'The Terror' Takakama [he's the one with the 700hp Z32] echoed Mr. K's sentiments. He and his crew can't wait to meet, race with and enjoy the company of their American Z cousins!!

April 15th

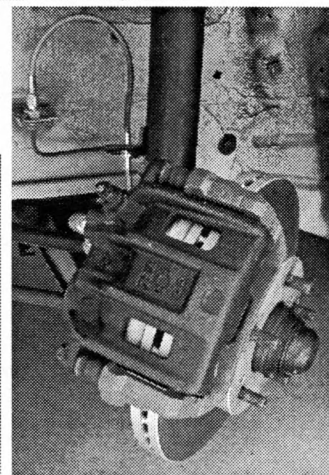

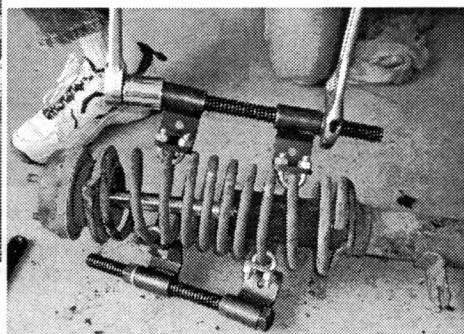

got a chance to tell their stories about how not to work on suspension (Everyone needs to have healthy respect for the energy stored in their springs.). Next, Dennis show us how to remove the rear struts from an early Z, we also talked about how easy it is to remove the rear struts from a 280ZX. Next, Darren showed us the latest upgrade to his 86 300ZX, rotors and calipers from an 88 turbo, then Darren show us how to remove front struts from an early 300ZX. All in all a great way to spend a Saturday afternoon. Thanks Dennis for having us over.

Tech Session #3 - Suspension

On Saturday April 15th, the Z Club gathered at Dennis's house for a Tech Session on suspension. When I arrived I noticed that Dennis had the rear of his silver 280Z jacked up with the wheel off (His powder coated suspension looks great.), I also noticed a strut assembly setting in the middle of the garage. When the spring compressor finally arrived we were ready to tear the thing apart. While Dennis, Ben and Al were disassembling the strut everyone
